

CLAIMS

5           1.- A hair regenerator which, being indistinctly applicable in alopecic areas in both sexes and being materialized in a mixture of epidermal growth factor, dexpanthenol and sodium hyaluronate, is characterized in that said epidermal growth factor consists of an amniotic-embryonic fluid extract from bovids during the fifth week of gestation.

10           2.- A hair regenerator according to claim 1, characterized in that said epidermal growth factor, that is, the amniotic-embryonic fluid extract, is concentrated at a magnitude of 300 nanograms/ml, both in the injectable regenerator and in the cosmetic regenerator for surface treatment, whereas dexpanthenol participates at an amount of 250 mg and sodium hyaluronate at an amount of 0.20 cm<sup>3</sup>, all per application dose of the regenerator.